None but the most permanent and finished operations performed, and no inducements to patients by low priced or roughly finished operations. Jeff. Davis' Message.

A dispatch from the headquarters of the army of the Potomac, dated January 15th, gives the following synopsis of the Message of Jeff. Davis, delivered to the rebel Congress after the New Year's assembling of that body:

After briefly referring to the campaign since his last message, he says that the anticipations which had entered into the contest have now ripened into conviction, which is not only shared with us by the common opinion of neutral nations, but is evidently forcing itself upon our enemies themselves, that the advent of peace will be hailed with joy. Our desire for it has never been concealed; but earnest as has been our wish for peace, and great as have been our sacrifices and sufferings during the war, the determination of this people has with each succeeding month become more unalterably fixed to endure any sufferings and continued sacrifices, however prolonged, until their right to self-government and the sovereignty and independence of the States shall have been triumphantly vindicated and established.

He then refers to history and the days when four States now forming a portion of the Confederacy were recognized as independent sovereignties by the two great maritime powers of Europe in 1783. He reviews the history of the Confederation and the ultimate reunion of the States, and asserts that the new Confederates were members of the Union, with a right, as independent sovereignties, to secede when in their judgment their safety and honor required such a step.

He speaks of the early determination of England, France and other European powers to confine themselves to the self-evident fact, and of the existence of strict neutrality during the progress of the war; but draws from this conclusion that their course of action was but an actual decision against the South and in favor of Union, at some time tending to prolonge hostilities. He complains of European injustice in other matters, citing the treaty with the United States for the abolishment of privateering, thus preventing the Confederates from disposing in foreign ports of prizes which their privateers captured.—This, he thinks, was a direct shaft aimed at the success of the Confederacy. Notwithstanding the repeated remonstrances by the Confederacy to neutral European Governments, and their own admission as to the insufficiency of the Federal blockade, neutral Europe has received these remonstrances in almost unbroken silence, submitting to the wrong inflicted in its commerce by the United States.

In relation to the Emancipation Proclamation he says that he may well leave it to the instincts of that common humanity which the beneficent Creator has imparted in the breasts of our fellow-men in all countries, to pass judgment on a measure by which several millions of human beings of an inferior race, peaceful, contented laborers in their sphere, are doomed to extermination; while, at the same time, they are encouraged to attempt the general assassination of their masters, by insidious recommendations to abstain from violence, unless in necessary self-defense.—Our own detestation of those who have attempted this most execrable massacre is recorded in the history of the guilty man who is tinctured with a profound sentiment for impotent rage, which this discloses. So far as regards the acts of this Government on such criminals as may attempt its execution, I confine myself to informing you that I shall, unless in your wisdom you deem some other course more expedient, deliver to the State authorities all commissioned officers of the United States who may hereafter be captured by our forces in any of the States embodied in the [Lincoln's] Proclamation, that they may be dealt with in accordance with the laws of those States provided for the punishment of criminals engaged in exciting servile insurrection.

In its political aspect this measure possesses great significance, and to it, in this light, I would invite your attention. It affords to our people the complete, crowning proof of the true nature of the designs of the party which elevated to power the present occupant of the Presidential chair at Washington, and which sought to conceal its purposes by the perfidious use of the most solemn and repeated pledges.

INADVERTENCE.—The New York Tribune says that if the Government is not more careful in the publishing of dismissed officers, it would be better to stop at once. We have already notes from some who were named as in disgrace, but who were regularly and honorably discharged. But the worst case is reported from Boston. Capt. Thompson, of the 22d Massachusetts, reported discharged for being absent without leave, was mortally wounded in the battle of Malvern Hill, and died a few days afterward in the hospital.

MONDAY MORNING, JAN 26 1863

Reckoning Without Their Host

The news from the East indicates that Jeff Davis and his aiders and abettors are calculating that the continued obstruction of the Mississippi, at Vicksburg, will alienate the Unionists of the North West from the national cause. In this matter the Confederates, like many other equally sagacious men, are reckoning on a sentiment that does not exist, that is, a feeling of disaffection towards the Union cause in the West, arising from the commercial disadvantage of not having the banks of the Mississippi cleared of rebel batteries. There is one mistake in regard to this question, which is frequently made by journalists on this coast, and that is in relation to the use of this great river to the West. It is not for purposes of exportation that the river is used, but as a means of conveying Western produce to the cotton and sugar planters of the South. But little, if any, produce from the West, destined for a foreign market goes down the river. When there is a foreign demand, grain and meats go by New York, which is the shortest route to Europe, and better, in respect to the safety of the articles shipped, than the river route for produce destined to a South American market.

The West then, needs a resuscitation of the internal commerce of the entire Mississippi valley—a commerce amounting in the aggregate to two hundred millions of dollars a year, and from which the free States of the North-West, with Missouri, Kentucky and East Tennessee added, derived not less than thirty millions of dollars profit, perhaps much more. This vast trade was the life blood, financially speaking, of the West, and was of wonderful advantage to the South, because it supplied that section with articles of prime necessity cheaper than they could be produced at home.

It is proposed to remedy the stoppage of the Mississippi river by enlarging the Illinois and Michigan canal, and the Erie canal. The first connects the Illinois river and Lake Michigan, and the second is the well known canal from Lake Erie to the Hudson river. These canals are to be adapted to the requirements of the immense trade pressing upon them, and will be of wonderful military utility in the means which they will give for moving our iron gunboats from the Mississippi to the Lakes, or from New York City to the Lakes, and, in case of need, to bring all of them to bear on a given point, along the sea-board, on the Lakes or down the Mississippi. This advantage is worth all that the scheme will cost, but it is not that which will satisfy the nation. It is the restoration of the Union, as a whole, with all the elements of power which each section contains within itself, combined into one grand harmonious power, having for its end and aim the settlement of the entire Continent under one Government and the perpetuation of the democratic theory of government to the end of time.

For the consummation of this plan, at once so just, so grand and so comprehensive, the present sacrifices of the nation are small, compared to the immense benefits to be derived from it. And never will the loyal West cease to strive for the absolute restoration of the Union while the East stands firm in the just cause. There is no bribe in all Jeff Davis' dominions which will suffice to seduce these people from the support of a cause which they know is just, and for which so many of them have freely laid down their lives. The navigation of the Mississippi is theirs by right of common conquest and purchase, and they will spurn the proposition to hold it by any meaner title.

W T APPORTIONMENT.—The Council apportionment bill for Washington Territory which was introduced by Mr More of Walla Walla county, gives the Eastern District, including Skamania and Clikitat counties four Councilmen, and fifteen Representatives. The Western District, all West of the Cascades will have five Councilmen and fifteen Representatives. The apportionment bill has a "rider" in the Capital removal bill and both measures are likely to be a failure in consequence. The representation is as fairly distributed as the shifting character of the population in the Eastern District will allow but if the statements of the Lewiston paper are to be credited, that section should have at least one hundred and fifty Representatives and Councilmen.

It is said that Yankee Doodle is from the Pyrenean district, in Spain. The people at San Sebastian all whistle or sing it. They claim it as theirs. Probably it was picked up by some adventurer, introduced among the British soldiers and from thence found its way to America.

C B No 80—An act to apportion the representation of the Territory, passed the House to day, by the following votes ayes, 1[illegible] nays, 12 Mr Bagley gave notice of a reconsideration on to morrow

The Revenue Bill was considered at some length on yesterday, and made the special order again for to day. Coming up in order, a motion to refer to a select committee of five prevailed. The committee consist of Messrs Bagley, Yantis, Lagan, Urquhart and Reed. The committee will doubtless report to morrow recommending the passage of the bill.

The bill for the removal of the seat of government to Vancouver was not reached to day. It will, no doubt, come up for action to morrow, and a long and strong-pulling fight is anticipated.

OLYMPIA, Jan 22, 186[illegible]

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

Contrary to the hope and expectation of many, the vote by which the bill to apportion the representation of the Territory of Washington passed yesterday, was reconsidered to day. Several motions were made to dispose of the bill, none of which prevailed; so it hangs upon the question to pass or reject it. The question therefore, as to its fate, will be definitely settled to morrow. A great deal of feeling was manifested in relation to the action taken upon this bill to day, not only by members of the Legislature, but by outside parties generally. My own opinion is now, that the bill will not pass though I hope to the contrary. The Clark county delegation are responsible for this action to day and unless they redeem themselves on the final vote and thereby secure the passage of the bill they will, to say the least, have committed an act of the most glaring injustice toward two thirds of the voters of this Territory and secure no possible advantage to themselves. It is a strange thing that when men take upon themselves a solemn oath to perform a certain duty, knowing well the full import and absolute necessity of that duty they can by an overt act, disregard it. This it seems to me will not rapidly apply to all these honorable gentlemen who by their votes say that a large proportion of the voters of this Territory shall go unrepresented in our Territorial Legislature—in other words be disfranchised. I say that these parties have no [illegible] any right to [illegible] which will [illegible] but [illegible] their acts are [illegible] the future record [illegible] into the [illegible]

On motion of Mr [illegible] it was resolved as the sense of the House that [illegible] would [illegible] retain due any [illegible] shall be paid.

Motions were adopted that the select Committee on Emancipation be instructed to inquire into the expediency of making appropriations in aid of Maryland and Western Virginia for the emancipation and colonization of [illegible]

Mr Fisher offered a resolution directing the Committee on Finance to inquire into the expediency of making an appropriation for the purpose of encouraging emigration from Europe to the United States. It seemed to him that under the present circumstances this was a matter of national necessity. The resolution was adopted.

The bills for the enlargement of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, for the passage of gun boats and munitions of war, etc, also the enlargement of Erie and Oswego Canals for similar purposes, were considered in the House to day. A motion to lay on the table was disagreed to by [illegible] ayes to [illegible] nays.

In the Senate, the bill making the appropriation for the deficiencies in the Civil Service of the Government, passed.

WASHINGTON, January 1[illegible].—A bill passed the Senate yesterday for raising 20,000 troops, for 12 months, for the defense of Kentucky. The bill subjects them to be ordered out of the State when the President deems it necessary.

NEW YORK, January 13.—A naval officer states, from information in his possession, that he believes the pirate Alabama has gone, or soon will go to the Eastern hemisphere. Semmes is known to have contemplated for some time a cruise on the coast of Africa and Southern Asia.

Fortress Monroe correspondence states that the rebels are suffering seriously by the destruction of the railroad at Goldsboro. They have sent a number of negroes to repair the track, protected by a large force under Evans. One division of the rebel army has been sent via Petersburg to Raleigh, N C. A portion of Lee's army has been sent to Richmond, ready to march upon North Carolina.

Gen Foster (Union) has been heavily reinforced, and is determined to keep the railroad communication severed between Richmond and the Gulf States. It is generally conceded that the large fleet at Newbern designs the capture of Wilmington.

MADISON, January 13.—The Supreme Court of Wisconsin has decided to sustain the writ of habeas corpus, issued in behalf of the Ozaukee rioters, arrested for resisting the draft—thus denying the right of the President to suspend the writ in such cases.

WASHINGTON, January 13th.—Secretary Chase, in answering a resolution from the House, says the soldiers have not been paid because he is not authorized to raise a loan by practicable methods under the existing laws; that the 5-20 bonds have not been sold because they could not be under the restrictions imposed by Congress. He says the arrears of army pay amount to treble the sum he can raise by all existing acts exclusive of that providing for the 5-20's. There has been obtained from all sources since July 1st $287,30[illegible],000, exclusive of receipts from customs, the entire total being about $32[illegible]. There has been paid to troops nearly $71,000,000, to the Quartermaster's Department, $110,000,000; to the Commissary Department, $1,000,000, and miscellaneous expenses, $32,000,000.

NEW YORK, January 14th.—The Evening Post's Washington special dispatch says our blockading fleet has just captured some very important dispatches from Jeff Davis and his Secretary of State to Mason, Slidell and others, in Europe. These dispatches give many important facts and details in regard to the condition of the rebels. They give the strongest statement of the desperate straits to which the rebel leaders are reduced and show that unless they can quickly get aid either by European intervention or by dividing the free States, and thus paralyzing the efforts of the Federal Government they must give up their cause for lost. These dispatches arrived here yesterday. They were put up in a tin box loaded with lead, [illegible] so as to sink [illegible] in case of an emergency. But our sailors were too quick for them.

NEW YORK, January 14th.—The following are the particulars of the final attack on Galveston just received:

On the night of the 31st December a reconnaissance was made by Capt [illegible] with 2[illegible] men which resulted in the discovery of a large rebel cavalry force in the western part of the city. It will be borne in mind that the only Federal force in the city was a detachment of the 42d Massachusetts regiment which was stationed at the wharf at the [illegible] of the city. This information was sent to Col Burrill [illegible] immediately [illegible] the Harriet Lane sent up signals announcing the approach of the enemy both by water and land. Col Burrill immediately turned out his battalion numbering less than 300 men, and constructed barricades of barrels, hogsheads and whatever else he could find across the wharf. He also tore up the planks of the wharf leaving only a narrow passage for the retreat of the pickets. During the day the rebels brought light pieces of artillery into the city [illegible] and planted them in [illegible] the Harriet Lane [illegible] engaged [illegible] skillful change [illegible] rebels defeated the [illegible] firing was going on [illegible] first position [illegible] Our soldiers fought bravely and [illegible] yield to the overpowering [illegible] twice they were [illegible] standing their ground [illegible]

NEW STEAMER.—The new steamer E. D. Baker was towed over from Vancouver yesterday morning by the Vancouver. She is brought over to take in her boiler and smoke-stack. The Baker is about the size of the O. S. N. Co.'s old favorite steamer, Carrie Ladd, and has two engines with sixteen-inch cylinders and six feet stroke. Her model is supposed to be equal to the highest speed obtainable with a stern-wheel boat. The finish of her upper works is as handsome as any of the boats on the lower Columbia. She is one of the boats designed for the People's Transportation Company's line.

BOON'S FERRY ROAD.—Articles of incorporation have been filed in the Clerk's office of Multnomah county for the construction of the Boon's Ferry McAdamized Road. The GREATEST SUCCESS of the CENTURY [illegible] ELECTRICAL MEDICINE.

This needs correcting, and in order that the [illegible] perceptible to remedial agents, [illegible]

No Compromise with Disease.

[illegible] nature will relieve herself, [illegible] stomach, liver, heart, kidneys [illegible] by ELECTRICAL [illegible] the aged, the jaded, the nervous, the dispirited, the melancholic, the dyspeptic and the invalid [illegible] under its benign influence.

To the Ladies of California.

Dr. Van Zandt's success with complaints of women, both in family and office practice, is owing to his correct views of [illegible] their maladies. Ladies can consult him with entire confidence, as he is no speculator upon human life—but is proving himself the only member of the legitimate profession in California who is really successful in removing those ills which are the peculiar province of the sex. His nigh appreciation of their delicately attuned nervous organism, together with their good sympathetic life, renders him doubly able to assuage those silent complainings which they bear so patiently and so long. No social [illegible] longer affect our home circles; for he can awaken the stricken energies; restore the wonted tenacity of the body; awaken the melancholic and despondings; arrest those drains which cause so much anxiety; cure those [illegible] maladies which have so long.

Baffled the Skill of Physicians.

Develope appetite, life and animation, dispel nervous headache, sinking at the stomach, wandering pains, wasting away of strength, extreme debility and lifelessness, hectic cough, sleeplessness, unpleasant dreams and that general depression of life's powers, which go to render her lifea misery and death a boon. Dr. Van Zandt, with his new method of exciting the Electro-Galvanic current, together with his remedial measures which are adapted to the necessities of California, will insure you of a complete and radical recovery of all bodily and mental infirmities, and will restore you to usefulness, and spare you a blessing to your [illegible] society.

All the world over wherever disease exists, whether special to the soil and climate or common to all regions—epidemic or casual, acute or chronic, contagious or non-contagious—it is as necessary to restore the ELECTRO-GALVANIC equilibrium, especially in California, as it is to give food to the starving. This statement is based upon a series of facts extending through many years, and verified by hundreds of patients; so that no principle of science, no rule of experience, no result of any well known cause, rests upon more sure and unassailable foundations, than those which underlie the world-wide reputation of Electricity for the cure of all nervous states of the body, faulty digestion, mental and physical debility or prostration, coughs, asthma, wandering pains of a rheumatic, gouty or mercurial character, and all forms of disease, the result of scrofula or cachectic habit of body.

None Need Despair of Relief.

If you have ulcers which will not heal—pains that cannot be removed—melancholy which you cannot shake off—loss of power which you cannot regain—depression of spirits which weigh you down—wakefulness that knows no sleeping—bustle that languishes for want of energy—a void which no society can fill—suspicion which no assurance can allay—Go to Dr. Van Zandt, for his great success and the safety with which he administers his new method of electrical excitation, together with his remedies, which are adapted to the requirements of climate and constitution will assure you of a complete and radical removal of all bodily and mental infirmities, within the scope of science and man to remove.

The Eye and Ear Diseases.

It must not be forgotten by the eye and ear sufferers that Dr Van Zandt has made these afflictions an especial study, and that he is the only Surgeon in our State who has a diploma for that branch of practice. Very many of the eye and ear troubles are purely deranged nervous action, and are cured by his electro-galvanic battery—as amaurosis, squinting, cataract, floating specks before the vision, twitching of the eyelids, nervous deafness, roaring and buzzing noises in the ears, giddiness, etc. All operations successfully done on those delicate organs of sense.

The Sisters.

It was one of those warm, bright, still summer mornings that always seem to me to belong to the Sabbath, that I, accompanied by my sister and her husband, for the first time entered the parish church of the pretty village of Beconsfield. The appointments of the interior pleased me, and I took my seat with a calm, home like feeling. I was much charmed with the singing, as the service proceeded, and the preacher was an earnest, eloquent man

I am not conscious of having been inattentive to the duties of the morning, but the eyes will wander sometimes. Our pew was on the left side of the center division; and in one on the other side of the aisle were two ladies whom, from the exceeding plainness of their dress, I set down in my own mind as sectarians. The ladies appeared young, that is, relatively—about three or four and twenty. The youngest was marked, but not at all disfigured, by the small-pox, and by the continued closed eyelids, evidently blind. She was fair, and had a pleasing expression of countenance, frequently improved by the feeling which flitted across her face. I was much interested in her. But her sister, as I presumed her to be, I could not understand, and yet her face was one of those which instantly captivate—a fair, oval, almost faultless face, with dark eyes, and plainly braided down hair. The imperturbability, however, with which she listened to the music and the sermon surprised me. Once or twice, a color rose to her transparent cheek, but it could not have been caused by either the singing or the eloquence, for it happened at times when there was apparently nothing to excite.

My visit was to extend only to a fortnight; three days had already elapsed; and as my sister was particularly engaged on the next day, I went out for a stroll by myself, or at least only accompanied by my nephew, Master Fredrick Rawlins, a fine little fellow of four or five. I had wandered through green lanes and over grassy meadows until I began to feel rather tired, and was looking at inviting stumps of trees, and green hillocks, when we came suddenly into a bylane, in which about a dozen cottages were clustered. Although I new we must be near home, I looked first at one house, and then at another, purposing to ask for a moment's rest and a glass of water, for the day was very warm. But one door was closed; at another, a mother was scolding some children; at another, two or three boys, together, with an aged man, seated in a wicker-chair, were busily talking, and busily plaiting some colored straw—everybody plaited about that village; and so I passed on, until I came to the last, and here I stood still. At the open door of the little abode, the blind young lady of the church was seated, a plain muslin cap over her fair hair, and in a dark cotton dress, rapidly plaiting some fine white straw. I was almost glad that her infirmity prevented her from seeing my embarrassment; but perceiving that her quick ear had caught the sound of strange footsteps, I said aloud to my little nephew: "Perhaps, Freddy, this lady would be kind enough to let us rest a few minutes."

"Lady!" repeated Fredrick; "why, it is Miss Rebecca."

"Ah! Master Rawlins, I am glad to see you; how is mamma?" she asked, rising quickly, and taking his little hand.

"Mrs. Rawlins," I said, in as gentle a voice as possible, "is quite recovering from her little illness, and was in church yesterday."

"How glad I am to hear it. You will pardon me, but are you not a relative of Mrs. Rawlins?"

"Her sister."

"I thought so: your voices are much alike."

During this colloquy, Freddy and I having seated ourselves, I looked, with a slight bow, at the imperturbable elder sister, who, similarly attired, was sitting at a small table at needle-work. I asked her to oblige me with a glass of water; she colored, and, I thought, looked confused; but before she could have complied, the blind sister approached, and, by her fingers and gestures, explained my request. She rose instantly, and my heart sank within me, as, with a sweet smile, and a real elegant inclination of the head, she presented the water.—Could she be deaf? The tears started to my eyes, and my hand trembled as I took the glass. What a fatality! As I looked upon the sweet face, that now seemed to me strangely intellectual, my fatigue was gone. I drank the water, and rising, pressed the deaf lady's hand, thanked her for the moment's rest, and then turning to the younger sister, took one of her hands in both mine, and said, in rather a tremulous voice, that I should trouble her soon again with a visit, as her house was so pleasantly situated; and then, taking the hand of my little nephew, who was singularly silent, wended my way thoughtfully to my sister's house.

It was a day or two before I had an opportunity of questioning my sister about those afflicted sisters.

"Ah!" she said, it is a sad story. Their father was a highly respectable solicitor, and Dr Rawlin's father attended the family as their physician. Poor Rebecca, that is, the younger Miss Glenfield, had the small-pox when she was about twelve years of age, and the poor mother, in attending upon her took it also. Mrs. Glenfield died; Rebecca recovered, but was blind. Mr. Glenfield, it seems, took it sadly to heart; he had loved his wife, and cared little to look upon his blind daughter. He took to speculation, and of course neglected his business. Then he was seized with the typhus fever; and poor Amelia, that is, the elder Miss Glenfield, in attending upon her father, was attacked in her turn. The father, in this case, died, and Miss Glenfield recovered, but to incurable deafness and absolute poverty; for when the claims upon Mr. Glenfield's estate were satisfied, the helpless girls had scarcely a shilling left."

"But had they no friends?"

"They had some relatives, and, I believe, at first were kindly treated. They have still some little annuity, and their seat in church; but I supposed nobody cared to take charge of them."

"And so these poor girls were left to God, and their own endeavors. Has Dr Rawlins given any attention to their case?"

"Oh yes, he has done a good deal for Miss Glenfield, so far as health is concerned; and as to poor Rebecca, there is no hope." And thus the conversation ended.

During the remainder of my stay at Beconsfield, my visits to the sisters were neither few nor far between, scarcely a day passing on which I did not call at the little cottage in the evening, for we soon became very familiar. It was really gratifying to observe the bright smile that would lighten Rebecca's face, and the sweet intelligent welcome of Miss Glenfield's eyes, that accorded so well with the few words she spoke, as my foot crossed the threshold.

On the afternoon previous to my leaving Beconsfield, I of course went to bid adieu; but this was not my only motive. Rebecca's cheek turned pale as I took her hand, and the tears stared to Miss Glenfield's eyes as she tried to smile a welcome. This was to be my last visit, and the solitary creatures had become used to my society. This time I could not stay long; so, after a little conversation about our parting, and the hope I had of our again meeting, I drew Rebecca a little aside, and asked her whether she thought her sister would feel much disappointed if a doctor pronounced her deafness incurable.

"It has been already pronounced incurable," replied Rebecca quickly; Dr. Rawlins said he could do nothing more. In fact, Miss Hill, we have dismissed every idea of the sort; yet, if she could recover her hearing even to a slight degree, what a comfort it would be, for you can't think how lonely I am, and so, of course, is she, poor thing; but then she can see."

This was a new revelation, for it had never occurred to me that Amelia's deafness was a deprivation to any but the deprived; but so it must have been, for she scarcely ever spoke except for some general or necessary purpose. During this colloquy, as I saw that Amelia was looking at us inquisitively, I requested her sister to explain my question.

"You are very kind, Miss Hill," observed Amelia, and a faint color rose to the poor girl's cheek; but it would be folly in us to think of impossibilities; we must dree our weird."

Notwithstanding this, after my return home, I could hardly sit down till I had paid a visit to a well-known aurist, Mr. Morton of Brook Street. He was a plain-spoken, plain-looking man, rather above the middle height, and with singularly intelligent and expressive dark eyes.

He listened patiently and attentively to my statement: and in reply to the question, as to whether there was any hope:—

"It is impossible to say, ma'am," he replied slowly, and as if deliberating, "without seeing the lady. Twenty-three years of age, and has lost her hearing through fever, about four or five years ago; it is a pity I had not been consulted earlier."

"I knew nothing of the case," I replied. "I have only become acquainted with the young lady these last two weeks; and besides, my brother-in-law, Dr. Rawlins, attended her."

"Dr. Rawlins of Beconsfield—a very clever man. But you see, Miss Rawlins, I have devoted myself exclusively to the ear—that is, to the organ of hearing; and a very interesting subject it is. I assure you, Miss Rawlins, that very many patients who have been submitted to me as incurably deaf, have had in reality no organic defect or disease at all."

As he seemed about starting a hobby, I at once resolutely asked when Miss Glenfield could see him.

"Miss Glenfield! She does not belong to the Glenfields of Beconsfield?"

"She is the late Mr. Glenfield's eldest daughter."

"Well, that is strange. Why, my brother served his articles to Mr. Glenfield; you see, he was a delicate youth, so it was thought the country would be best."

"But Mr. Glenfield is dead, and the two poor girls are left in comparative poverty."

"Dead! Ah! I remember the fever.—But the other daughter—she is not deaf?"

"She is not deaf; but, by a strange fatality, she is blind."

"Blind! Poor things, poor things.—Well, bring the young lady any morning you choose—that is, before twelve."

"But, sir," I replied, "Miss Glenfield resides at Beconsfield, so it will be necessary to appoint some particular morning, when we shall be happy to attend you."

"At Beconsfield! Why, I am going to Beconsfield to-morrow. Mrs. Smith of Oak Lodge has sent for me; she is subject to deafness at her confinements. Hers is only physical weakness. But as I am called professionally, of course I attend; and perhaps, after all, it is as well. I think your brother attends the family."

"Very likely, sir. But what about Miss Glenfield?"

"Do you give me her address. I shall have to attend Mrs. Smith for two or three weeks; it will be no trouble to me, you see; and during that time, I shall be able to ascertain whether I can do anything for your friend."

While he was speaking, I had drawn out my card-case and pencil, and on the back of one of my own cards, had written, "Miss Glenfield, Woods Cottage, Woods Lane;" and when he had finished speaking, presented the card and a guinea—the usual fee, I believe, for a morning visitor. He took the fee and the card, and after glancing at them, placed both in the pocket of his waistcoat, and then rising as I left my chair, he said: "I take this fee. Miss Rawlins"—(Miss Rawlins! when he had just read as plain as the engraver could write, Miss Hill!)—"I receive this fee in testimony that I have undertaken the case; but I take no more. Whatever attendance, or medicine Miss Glenfield may require, I will see to myself, and rest assured, I will spare no pains. Good-morning, Miss Rawlins;" and bowing me out, he closed the street-door.

To be Concluded.

PUTRID SORE THROAT.—Take half a pint of good old rye whisky, pulverize one or two large spoonsful of common salt, put it in the whisky, shake it well, and then gargle the throat.

Proclamation by the Governor.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, PORTLAND, OREGON,
January 6, 1863.

By the President of the United States through Brigadier General George Wright, commanding the Department of the Pacific, and Brigadier General Benjamin Alvord, commanding the District of Oregon, I have been requested to raise six additional companies required to complete the 1st Regiment of Cavalry, Oregon Volunteers. They will be needed the coming Spring on the frontiers of this State and Washington Territory, and for an expedition against the Snake Indians, who have so long been mercilessly engaged in robbing emigrants and murdering our fellow-citizens, I cannot doubt that the citizens of Oregon, who have always promptly responded to any demand for their military services, will in like manner respond to this call; thereby showing their loyalty to the Government, and aiding in chastising marauding bands of Indians which infest our frontiers.

The enlisted men, when mounted, will be supplied with horses by the United States, it being understood that they will be mounted or not, as shall be deemed advisable by the Government.

Propositions to raise a whole company which will furnish their own horses and horse equipments, may be entertained. The men are in such cases entitled to forty cents a day for the use and risk of their horses and horse equipments.

Each company will consist of one hundred enlisted men, and when mustered into the service of the United States to serve for three years, unless sooner discharged.

Recruiting offices will be immediately opened at Portland, Dalles City, and perhaps at other places. By the Governor,

ADDISON C. GIBBS.

CYRUS A. REED, Adjutant General.
